SHIRA A. SCHEINDLIN, U.S.D.J.:

On March 7, 2014, New World Trading Co. Ltd. ("New World") submitted a motion in limine objecting to the admissibility of ninety defense exhibits as hearsay. On March 12, 2014, 2 Feet Productions, Inc. ("2 Feet") submitted a chart listing the ninety exhibits and asserting various hearsay exclusions or exceptions as to each. The court need not labor through each of the ninety exhibits before trial and makes the following categorical rulings with respect to 2 Feet's assertions.

1. Statements of a Party Opponent

2 Feet has identified twenty-four emails as statements of a party opponent under Federal Rule of Evidence ("Rule") 801(d)(2). I find that the emails written by a New World agent or employee are admissible as statements as a party opponent, assuming the agent or employee was acting within the scope of his employment. To the extent that any exhibit includes an email chain with emails not written by a New World agent or employee, those emails are not admissible under this exclusion.

2. Business Records

2 Feet asserts that many of the emails at issue should be considered business records under Rule 803(6). An email could conceivably qualify as a business record if, for example, it confirms a sale. But most of the emails here contain unique and sporadic communications, not created as a record of any "regularly conducted business activity." They, therefore, fall outside the exception. Rule 803(6) applies only where (1) the record was made "at or near the "regularly conducted [business] activity," (3) creating the record was a "regular practice of that activity," (4) a "qualified witness" or "certification" verified that these conditions are met, and (5) neither the "source of information nor the method . . . of preparation" was untrustworthy. To the extent that 2 Feet still believes that any individual email qualifies, it may raise the issue on a case-by-case basis at trial.

3. Residual Exception

2 Feet seeks to admit several emails based on the residual exception.

This exception — intended to be used "very rarely, and only in exceptional circumstances" — applies only to statements that (1) have "equivalent circumstantial guarantees of trustworthiness," (2) are "offered as evidence of a material fact," (3) are "more probative . . . than any other evidence that the proponent can [reasonably] obtain, and (4) if admitted will "best serve the purposes of these rules and the interests of justice." Assuming no challenge to authenticity, this exception could apply to individual emails created in the ordinary course of business — even those that fail to qualify under any other exception. At trial, 2

Feet may re-assert this exception but only on a limited case-by-case basis.

4. Unavailability

2 Feet erroneously lists Rule 804(a)(2) as the basis for admitting several emails at issue. Rule 804(a)(2) states only the criteria for witness unavailability and is not a hearsay exception.

5. Non-Hearsay

2 Feet argues that several emails are not hearsay because they are offered to show the effect on the listener. I find that the emails at issue are hearsay because they are clearly offered for the truth of their contents.
